BACKGROUND:

The Oregon State Police (OSP) maintain an online database of over 1,300 missing persons in Oregon, known as the Missing Children/Adults Clearinghouse, listing their county of residence at time of disappearance, the date when they were last seen, age when they were last seen, and their current age. A person is considered missing when their whereabouts are unknown, regardless of circumstance; they are added to the database once they are reported to a law enforcement agency. OSP is also the lead agency in Oregon for the America's Missing: Broadcast Emergency Response Plan, better known as Amber Alert, which is an initiative of the U.S. Department of Justice and operates as a voluntary partnership between law enforcement, broadcasters, and transportation agencies to activate urgent bulletins in certain child abduction cases.

House Bill 2764 A establishes a new alert system to provide for a rapid response similar to an Amber Alert, in cases where an Amber Alert criteria does not apply. The Endangered Missing Person Alert could be issued in cases where the individual is missing as the result of abduction by a stranger that does not meet Amber Alert criteria; who is missing under circumstances that are unexplained, possibly criminal, or inherently dangerous; if the person is in need of medical attention or prescription medication; if the person was previously the victim of a threat or act of violence; or if the person is incapable of returning to their residence without assistance due to mental or House Bill 2764 A also directs the OSP Superintendent to stand up a task force to develop the Endangered Missing Person Alert System. Participants must include municipal, county, university, and state law enforcement; broadcasting and cable service providers; the Oregon Department of Emergency Management; the Oregon Disabilities Commission; the Department of Human Services; and the Governor's Commission on Senior Services. The measure specifies that Indian tribes may participate in the Task Force at their option.
