Measure: SB548

It seems in a state as opulent as ours, in a nation as wealthy as ours, the current condition of foster child transferral is asymmetric to our means. There are plenty of government programs that should proceed this in priority, and not precede it. Ask whoever you want, of whatever party or political leaning, and it seems that improving the foster care system gains bipartisan support. These are children who have already had the world shove them down again and again. Do we want the little help we offer to also feel like a slap in the face? No more trash bags.
