I have worked in Dental for 6 years, 2 years ago I took a radiology course through LCC. I passed my Hands on test, I then took my written exam and failed. In my opinion the test went over non necessary questions to be a certified dental radiographer. When administered by my dentist and instructors I have taken excellent radiographs for the past two years. I have recently started to study again to retake my written exam and find it very unnecessary the questions that are required to know for the exam. I am wanting to get my EFDA certification but have been delayed due to not passing my radiology exam. I hope this passes in hopes to getting more dental assistants. There is a high demand for assistants and this would help assistants and dentists.
