

Submitter: Ricki Young
On Behalf Of:
Committee: House Committee On Rules
Measure: HJR20

As far as 16 years old to vote goes, it a horrible idea. Most kids at this age have no real life experience or only a quarter-full understanding of government and its workings. Even most adults don't full understand government. Liberal government officials want this because younger voters can be easily persuaded because of there lack of knowledge and under developed brains in the way government works to achieve a larger voting base and more power. We hear all the time that the human brain doesn't fully develop until at least 25 years old. Why on earth would we lower it when as most liberals like to use (the science as there arguement) tells us it should be older, not younger!!! This is a power grab and nothing else. There is no way at 16 I should have been able to vote, but at least then they taught government and history.