Hello HCOCEE

I got friends attempting to figure out where inflation comes from....

I fear we found it, and it is you :(

Clean energy is a worthy goal... but in reality at what cost.

Budgets are tight in the homes of people working paycheck to paycheck.

It comes as no shock to me that a 60% reduction project to combat emissions is a very costly venture... if it could even be realized.

Seems by 2035 we will all be driving E cars hooked to a electric grid devoid of hydro power.

I just found out talking to a scientist that the biggest carbon emitter in the world is the ocean.

I don't think there is a thought out plan here... but it will most likely be a expensive do nothing program that will take away budgets to better protect communities from wildfire's caused by powerlines. (fires being a huge carbon emitter).
