

Submitter: Denise Holley

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Education

Measure: SB3

Not all of our high school students will go on to college, but they will all handle money. They need to learn to live on less than their income so they can save money for a car, home, or vacation. Many students do not learn these skills at home because their family may be in debt.

Advanced math courses are important for students who pursue a career in science or engineering. But money managing skills are essential for all students.