While I have only been riding motorcycles for a few years now and I am apart of the younger generation, I have found the concept of lane filtering or “splitting” to be more appealing as time goes on. With more and more people on their phones and not looking at the road, I have been almost hit numerous times between my time riding in Portland and Seattle area. I have a feeling if this were put in place the number of motorcyclists accidents would reduce over time due to the natural change of the population and traffic in Oregon.
