I strongly support this change. I have been biking for many years and being passed by a high speeding car in a no passing zone is one of the scariest scenarios. This risks a head on collision with a vehicle in the other lane endanger the occupants of two vehicles and the bicyclist. It is particularly dangerous on a blind corner. In most cases a driver would have to wait less than a minute to find a clear and safe stretch to pass. It seems a dangerous situation occurs each time I go out biking so this not uncommon.
