I think that having a written climate change plan would impact our schools in an immensely positive way. Being able to have a plan to teach our children about something that is slowly killing our planet would help understanding starting from a young age. And hopefully help more people, not just students, combat climate change on a higher more including level. This bill affects me and my life because growing up none of my teachers talked about climate change and dodged questions because they either didn't want to answer them or they just didn't know how. Not learning about climate change until I was older affected my basic knowledge of what it is and why its happening. I truly think that introducing a learning curriculum about climate change and helping our planet not just to the extent of reuse, reduce, recycle in schools would help raise awareness that could change the tide of how things are going in our world, even if its small. This is about everyone's futures and changing how people view climate change, and it is very important to me.
