

My name is Amelia and although I am only a freshman at PSU, the “Career and Community Studies” program at PSU that helps people with intellectual disabilities succeed, has really helped me. I think oftentimes people don’t think to include people with disabilities in continuing their education, assuming that they are not as smart, but a lot of students love to learn and are passionate about certain topics. Inputting programs like this not only in other colleges, but also community colleges, would give so many people with disabilities an opportunity to continue their education in an inclusive way and still be able to be a part of the college experience that I'm sure a lot of you have memories from. Especially community college’s, because some families are on a fixed income. I really hope you consider supporting programs like this in the future. Thank you.
