

Submitter: Travis Smith

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Labor and Business

Measure: SB907

This feels so obvious that it's almost surprising there's any opposition. Nobody should have to choose between staying safe/alive or their job. What a dystopian world we live in where Americans are so afraid of losing work that they are forced to risk their lives just to make ends meet. No elected official would be required to stay at work if their building were on fire, so why should farmworkers be forced to work around rampaging wildfires or other disasters?