I support ranked choice voting because it will move us away from binary candidate choices, to a more nuanced evaluation of the issues. It will compel candidates to be more clear on where they stand on a broader range of policy questions, and minimize competitive polarization. Voters will continue to be engaged in the process beyond a win-lose single choice.