Measure: SB1051

Let the need precede the any further destruction of our food capacity. Promised rollbacks of boundary changes in given they are not needed are pie-in-the-sky: too many profits, unraveling of special considerations and general "pro-development" aka urban sprawl advocates will assure new waves of strip malls covering croplands. The infrastructure is already horribly inadequate to the growth already in place: we need more clean air, more croplands, more reclaiming of brownlands, better regulation before we aggressively enter a contest that we've probably already lost and perhaps if wise we'd drop out of.
