Gun Control in Occupied France by Stephen Halbrook specifically page 203 it reads in part:

“There were three million hunting guns in France ???? in 1939, according to Saint-Hubert-Club de France, a hunting association. After the Nazi takeover and occupation 1940-44, some 715,000 were surrendered by their owners in the occupied zone. In the zone that was not occupied until 1942, 120,000 hunting guns were turned in to the French authorities. The hunting guns not surrendered were, if not lost or stolen, hidden by their owners and in some cases used by the Resistance. That means only 835,000 of the three million hunting guns — less than one third — were turned in by French citizens threatened with the death penalty for not doing so. This is an incredible testament to the inefficacy of gun control under the most extreme circumstances.”

Since all of these bills are unconstitutional and do not or cannot define “ an undetectable firearm” I obviously cannot own something that is undefined !
