Most families with guns teach their kids or send them to hunter safety courses to learn appropriate gun safety. I think most high school kids trained in such a manner are perfectly safe. I do not think setting any age limit is going to impact safety. Those who do not intend to follow your rules will not, but the law abiding are being hindered and they are not risking anyone. I know many many very very responsible teenagers, not all our kids are dangerous by any means. Focus on REALLY hindering KNOWN troubled youth from getting access. So many times a shooter was on the radar and NOTHING WAS DONE THAT COULD HAVE BEEN DONE. Hold people accountable that are dangerous, let the good guys go free of regulation that will not help safety.
