Concealed handgun license holders are not the people committing crimes. They have undergone training, and background checks to obtain their licenses. People who follow the law and who are trained will be unable to protect themselves as well as others. Passing more laws will not keep people safe rather it turns law-abiding citizens into criminals.

Perhaps more effort should be made to keep the criminal element out of public areas by enforcing the sentences handed down when convicted by a jury of their peers instead of continually reducing them or making their offenses a lesser crime.
