I strongly support the police, and this seems like another way of making their work very difficult. I think the internal investigations are enough to get the few bad police out of the job.

Most police killings are because criminals resist arrest, attack the police, many are on drugs and extra aggressive or strong, and I do not support criminals getting away with that. If a policeman tells you to lay down and hands out, DO JUST THAT and let the subsequent justice system work. We need criminals arrested, off the streets, convicted, and in the case of assault, rape, murder, KEPT IN JAIL, in the case of theft, arrested, off the streets convicted, in jail for a few years with the goal of rehabilitation. Blaming the police is not a solution. No one will want to be a policeman, policemen will hesitate in a bad situation and pay with their lives. I think there is enough to guard against rogue police, we don't need another layer of supervision at great cost to the public.
