Measure: HB3501

The Right to Rest bill should not be given any further consideration. Other solutions must be found. The idea that anybody can camp on any public space being codified into law is ridiculous, the fact that the houseless can practically do this is already bad enough, much like making drug use legal despite the fact that it was rarely prosecuted and the police and courts had extreme leeway to enforce these laws. Many democratic voters are going to seriously reconsider the next election if things keep going like this.
