I've come close to living in my car a few times and I completely empathize with folks who have no homes. I even empathize with folks that just don't want a home. When I'm out driving I'm always looking for good camping spaces do any of you do that? What I do have is an absolute revulsion regarding the trash. If I am camping I keep a clean camp. I'm sure many folks do as well. So why is it incumbent on all of us to pick up abandoned camps in hazmat suits! Littering is a crime isn't it? I prefer the idea of managed campgrounds with facilities and self policing. If a person doesn't want to live there they should move on.
