Measure: HB4130

Corporations require profits for continued survival. However the practice of medicine cannot function in that mode because there is no way to predict what illness, injury or catastrophic event might occur. Therefore a profit cannot be assumed.

In medical practice the patient must be the only thing that matters. One persons illness/injury may require very little care whereas another patient with the same problem may require intensive treatment.

Proper delivery of medical care requires multiple individuals, expensive equipment/location and time.
