I do not support banning book bans. I think that schools need to have censorship of the things that they are allowing students to read. Especially at a young age, children do not need to be introduced to things that are completely beyond what they need to know about in a developing age. I am a student and I think that it is okay to have some censorship in public schools because schools need to be neutral, we don't need to have biases towards or against groups, therefore, controversial things should stay out of our libraries. I know that when I have children, I will not allow them to read inappropriate things that are beyond what they need to know about. We need facts in our classroom, not biased ones. Teach the students what they need to know and leave out the narrative and slants.
