Oregon already has very high taxes.

How can you justify taxing pretty much everything we own on top of everything else?

And not even to fund the services we generally expect from government but some new program for our "safety."

And how is this to be enforced?

Are we to tell the government about everything we own every year?

Is it really the business of Oregon to audit all things owned by all its citizens?

And fundamentally, is a thing really ever owned if we must keep paying taxes on it?

This tax would effectively make us serfs on the land our forefathers fought for.
