This sounds like a waste of money and making Oregon's already big government to big. We don't need another task force or a statewide funding authority. To state the obvious solution. Give law enforcement more funding with the already massive revenue Oregon brings in and let the police do their jobs and back them up when they due. each count and city should already know what they need for public safety is and also this is too broad of a term: it needs to have a detailed list of what is considered public safety.
