This is a great bill. It gives parents the opportunity to have a choice in picking the best learning environment for their students education. I see the OSBA is opposed to this bill which should really cause you to wonder, why? The OSBA says they support students getting the best education but their definition of "best education" is skewed. What they really mean is "best indoctrination." Pass this bill, so that parents can have more opportunity to send their students to a school with a good education and not indoctrination.

Also, special needs students can already go to any school. How is it equitable that one like group has the ability to go to any school for an education and other students cannot?
