5 years ago I voted to stay on daylight savings times. While I understand that this ultimately stalled out, that doesn't mean I want to stay 100% on standard time. Imagine the sunrise at 4:51AM (meaning the skies begin to light up as early as 415AM. No thank you. I would much rather continue to switch the clocks twice a year. Not to mention, it will be absolute mess for the border towns, especially the Washington residents commuting into Portland. Not to mention the national/global companies that communicate with the their colleagues on the east coast would have a 4 hour difference for half the year. The entire plan is terrible. Scrap it.
