BACKGROUND:

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), formerly called food stamps, is a public benefits program administered by the United States Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS). SNAP provides benefits via Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) cards that may be redeemed at participating businesses to purchase food. Eligibility to receive SNAP benefits is mainly income-based, although there are exceptions for certain populations. The Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS) is responsible for performing eligibility determinations through the Oregon Eligibility Partnership. Federal law allows ODHS to not consider certain types of household income when determining eligibility for SNAP, such as cash and medical assistance, but other types of payments such as unemployment benefits, child support, worker's compensation, and other types of public benefits must be considered unless the state applies for a waiver from USDA.

The Working Family Household and Dependent Care Credit (WFHDC), established in 2015, allows households under certain income levels to receive a refundable income tax credit that partially reimburses the cost of providing care for children under 13 and adults with disabilities while family members are working, looking for work, or attending school. The amount refunded by this credit as a partial reimbursement of qualified expenses varies depending on household size, income, and dependent age.

SB 64 STAFF MEASURE SUMMARY

The Legislative Assembly previously considered Senate Bill 438 in 2023 that would have required ODHS to apply for a waiver to exclude WFHDC payments from eligibility determinations for SNAP, but the bill was not enacted. The Legislative Assembly also passed House Bill 3235 in 2023 that created a new refundable tax credit for families with young children and directed ODHS to apply for a similar waiver to exclude payments from that tax credit from SNAP eligibility determinations, but the federal government rejected the request.
