BACKGROUND:

Dolly Parton's Imagination Library is a book gifting program that provides a free, age-appropriate book to children ages birth through five, regardless of their family's income, each month. The program launched in 1995 to distribute books to children living in Sevier County, Tennessee, and has since spread to every state nationwide and abroad to Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia, and Ireland. The program partners with local organizations in selected coverage areas to enroll children and coordinate book delivery to families. Local affiliates enter enrollment information into a national database and transfer $2.20 per child per month to the national organization, which mails a book to each enrolled family at no cost to the family.

In 2023, the Legislature considered House Bill 2872 A, which would have established the Oregon Imagination Library Program and directed the Department of Learning and Care (DELIC) to partner with a national organization that works through local partners to deliver free books to children. HB 2872 A was not enacted. However, in 2023, the Legislature appropriated $1.7 million through Senate Bill 5506 in funding to DELIC to administer the Imagination Library program in Oregon.
