BACKGROUND:

Currently, if a claimant prevails against the denial of workers' compensation claim, the court, board or Administrative Law Judge may order payment of the claimant's reasonable expenses and costs for records, expert opinions and witness fees. Payments for witness fees, expenses and costs ordered are made by the insurer or self-insured employer. The payments may not exceed $1,500 unless the claimant demonstrates extraordinary circumstances justifying payment of a greater amount.

House Bill 2799 removes the $1,500 limit on reimbursable attorney costs that an insurer or self-insured employer may pay if claimant prevails against the denial of a workers' compensation claim. The measure allows for reasonable attorney fees for costs and expenses including but not limited to records, expert opinions, and witness fees incurred in any dispute over entitlement to, or amount of, workers' compensation benefit.
