BACKGROUND:

Currently, regional programs for children with low incidence disabilities serve children ages 0 to 21 who require specialized services and meet eligibility requirements. The types of disabilities that would allow a child to be eligible include hearing impairments, vision impairments, autism spectrum disorders, orthopedic impairments, deaf-blindness, and traumatic brain injury. Because the occurrence of these types of disabilities is relatively rare, school districts find it difficult to employ specialized staff in these areas.

In 2021, Senate Bill 53 required the State Board of Education to study efficient and effective funding methods in regional inclusive service education programs. The Regional Inclusive Service Senate Bill 53 Report recommends that the Regional Inclusive Service programs receive a stable revenue stream to provide adequate funding to students who experience low incidence disabilities.
