BACKGROUND:

According to the Oregon Department of Emergency Management, in 2020, multiple wildfires burned over one million acres of land statewide. Approximately 500,000 people were under evacuation status, and more than 40,000 people had to evacuate their homes. While Oregon's state and county fairgrounds had previously sheltered community members and livestock during emergencies, during the 2020 fires those facilities provided lifesaving shelter to evacuees.
