BACKGROUND:

The Oregon Liquor and Cannabis Commission (OLCC) is responsible for regulating the sale and service of alcoholic beverages in Oregon by administering Oregon's Liquor Control Act. OLCC is also tasked with regulating the production, processing, and sale of recreational cannabis in Oregon through the Control, Regulation, and Taxation of Marijuana and Industrial Hemp Act.

The Oregon Health Authority (OHA) houses the Oregon Medical Marijuana Program (OMMP). OMMP registers medical marijuana patients, caregivers, and growers. OHA is also responsible for the rules for marijuana testing and oversees the accreditation of marijuana testing laboratories. OHA also houses Oregon Psilocybin Services (OPS) within their Public Health Division's Center for Health Protection. OPS implements Ballot Measure 109 from 2020, codified in ORS chapter 475A. By law, OHA is tasked with licensing and regulating the manufacturing, transportation, delivery, sale, and purchase of psilocybin productions and the provision of psilocybin services in Oregon.

In 2019, the Legislative Assembly enacted House Bill 3200. HB 3200 required applicants for a recreational marijuana production license who did not own the premises to be licensed to submit signed informed consent from the owner of the premises to OLCC. HB 3200 also required applicants for a medical marijuana grow site registration who did not own the premise to be registered to submit signed informed consent from the owner to OHA. A similar provision was required for a psilocybin manufacturer license when Ballot Measure 109 was codified into ORS chapter 475A.

Senate Bill 907 requires an applicant for a license to manufacture psilocybin, medical marijuana grow site registration, or a medical marijuana processing site registration to submit to the Oregon Health Authority (OHA) information on the ownership and location of the premises to be licensed or registered. Prohibits OHA from issuing license or registration without verifying ownership of the premises and obtaining specified consent from owner of the premises, when the premises is not owned by the applicant. The measure requires an applicant for a license to produce or process marijuana to submit to the Oregon Liquor and Cannabis Commission (OLCC) information on the ownership and location of the premises to be licensed. Prohibits OLCC from issuing license without verifying ownership of the premises and obtaining specified consent from owner of the premises, when the premises is not owned by the applicant.
