BACKGROUND:

Oregon law directs the Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) and county juvenile departments to collaborate on diverting youth from correctional facilities to community-based services. ORS 420.017 requires juvenile departments to develop diversion plans that outline necessary services and administrative processes, including procedures for preliminary parole revocation hearings. OYA oversees and coordinates these local diversion plans and juvenile crime prevention services, which may include detention and other juvenile department functions. The statute also directs OYA, in consultation with county juvenile departments and the Youth Development Division, to adopt rules that align high-risk juvenile crime prevention plans with local diversion efforts.

Senate Bill 816 modifies ORS 420.017 by requiring each juvenile department to develop a local diversion plan. The measure authorizes OYA to make rules for administration and coordination of juvenile diversion and crime prevention services. The measure also requires OYA to consult with county juvenile departments regarding high-risk juvenile crime prevention plans and juvenile diversion plans.
