BACKGROUND:

The Employment Related Day Care (ERDC) program provides subsidized access to child care for families with working parents, parents who are in school, or families that receive Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). The program is administered by the Department of Early Learning and Care (DELIC). Eligibility for the program is typically determined based on family income, but other factors such as whether parents are enrolled in school may be considered. According to DELIC, as of March 2025, the income limit for ERDC initial eligibility is 200% of the federal poverty level (FPL).

Eligibility for ERDC has expanded in recent years. HB 2683, passed by the Legislative Assembly in 2023, directed the Early Learning Council to establish rules that independently considered factors such as household income, the family's use of or risk of needing to use child welfare services, and the family's use of or risk of needing to use homelessness services. Under HB 2683, aspects of these rules must be implemented by July 2025 and July 2027.

In November 2023, ERDC opened a waitlist due to increased program demand (DELIC, 2024). Some families, such as those receiving TANF, may bypass the waitlist. According to DELIC, families who apply for ERDC are screened for bypass exemptions. If they do not meet a bypass, they are added to the waitlist but are not screened for full ERDC eligibility. This means that the waitlist is not necessarily a representation of eligible families for ERDC.

The ERDC Program Data dashboard publishes data related to the program including the number of families on the waitlist. According to the dashboard, there were 10,200 families on the waitlist as of March 11, 2025.
