The amendment also permits a court to allow nonresidents of Oregon to participate in a comparable government-authorized program outside of Oregon in lieu of completing a treatment program in Oregon as part of a diversion agreement.

REVENUE: No revenue impact

FISCAL: Fiscal impact issued

BACKGROUND:

Under ORS 813.020, upon convicting a person for driving under the influence of intoxicants (DUII), the court shall require the person to "complete a screening interview and a treatment program as provided in ORS 813.021. ORS 813.021 lays out the standards for that screening, including that the court shall order the person convicted of the crime to "pay directly to the agency or organization conducting the screening interview a fee of $150."

The Intoxicated Driver Program Fund is composed of certain fines and fees paid by defendants in DUII cases or otherwise provided by law, gifts, or grants. The fund can be used, among other things, to pay for certain aspects of diversion agreements for indigent defendants. Currently, screening interviews are not included. The -2 amendment would allow for the fund to be used to pay for screening interviews and education programs for indigent defendants. A court can allow a United States servicemember on active duty to participate in a qualifying treatment program outside of Oregon instead of an in-state one as part of a DUII diversion agreement. The -2 amendment would expand that authority to include nonresidents of Oregon.
