BACKGROUND:

Existing statute establishes that public employers shall grant preferences to veterans of the Armed Forces of the United States who apply to vacant civil service positions, or who seek promotion to a civil service position, provided the individual meets any minimum and special qualifications. Some members of the National Guard are not currently covered by these provisions. For scored applications, this provides a five percent bonus for veterans, which increases to 10 percent for disabled veterans. Public employers not appointing a veteran to a vacant civil service position must provide their reasons for the decision upon written request by the individual.
