RE: Response to Question from Vice-Chair McIntire re: Challenged Materials/SB 1098

Chair Neron, Vice-Chair McIntire and Dobson, and members of the committee,

In response to the information I shared from the State Librarian regarding challenged materials (appended), Vice-Chair McIntire asked whether the materials listed were in school libraries or public libraries. The two specific examples given were a Playboy magazine and the Pocket Book of Sex and Chocolate. I forwarded the questions to Wendy Cornelisen, the State Librarian, for her assistance. She responded:

“The list of titles that have been challenged does not indicate the library type, but the original reports (which is information on that title list) does include this information. I’ve been able to cross-reference the specific titles mentioned below:

- “In 1996, Playboy Magazine was challenged both at Lake Oswego Public Library and at Multnomah County Public Library. 1996 Annual report | State Library of Oregon Digital Collections
- “In 2002, the Pocket Book of Sex and Chocolate was challenged at a public library. See 2002 Annual report | State Library of Oregon Digital Collections

“This work also highlights changes to the report over the years. In 1996, the library where the challenged occurred are named, but by 2002, challenges are sorted by library type only. That practice continues today.

“As part of the State Library’s mandate to collect and preserve state agency reports, all of the OIFC reports are available here: <https://digitalcollections.library.oregon.gov/nodes/view/93383>. These original documents might be the most helpful resource for Rep. McIntire.”

I hope that this is helpful and addresses the questions. We are happy to answer anything further, and thank you for your consideration of SB 1098.

Sincerely,

Nathan Soltz

Chair Frederick, Vice-Chair Weber, and Members of the Committee:

The State Library of Oregon supports libraries of all kinds across the state, including school libraries. As part of these efforts, staff provide consulting and information to libraries facing materials challenges. We maintain the Oregon Intellectual Freedom Clearinghouse \(OIFC\), which compiles information concerning intellectual freedom challenges in libraries and schools in Oregon. We submit this testimony to share information we have learned through our work that may be helpful as you consider SB 1098. The State Library has no position on SB 1098.

OIFC collects reports of objections to library materials, policies, displays, and programs, as well as reports of hate crimes, confidentiality issues, and related incidents. Those incidents are compiled in annual reports. As we noted in this press release last September, public libraries, academic libraries, and schools reported challenges to more books and other materials between July 2023 and June 2024 than at any point since we began collecting data in 1987. This data is all available in the OIFC 2024 report.

The initiator of a challenge may state a variety of reasons for challenging a material's inclusion in a library or school. Common objections include claims that a material is sexually explicit, contains profanity, is unsuited to its target age group, or expresses an objectionable viewpoint. Challenges occurred at 40 different libraries, schools, and colleges, in rural and urban areas. There were challenges in 20 of Oregon's 36 counties, focused in western and northeast Oregon.

A clear pattern has emerged in recent OIFC reports: incidents and challenged materials are disproportionately about, by, or center the stories of individuals who belong to an underrepresented protected class under ORS 659.850. In 2023-24, 87% of the items challenged told the stories of one or more underrepresented groups. 66% of challenged materials focused on 2SLGBTQIA+ people, while 22% centered Black, Indigenous, or people of color.

The data shared here were gathered through reports of challenges at schools and libraries, media stories, and our staff's experience working on challenge incidents. However, we have reason to believe that incidents in Oregon are underreported. Many school and library staff are not aware of the option to report such incidents. Despite the anonymity of the reporting process, staff also may decline to report for fear of political blowback, job repercussions, or media attention on their organization.

We anticipate the numbers we have shared here would be significantly higher if all intellectual freedom incidents in Oregon were reported. Incidents may be particularly underreported in schools.

The State Library of Oregon cultivates, preserves, and delivers library and information services to foster lifelong learning and community engagement.

We have seen higher incidences of challenges in schools that are handled “quietly” by removing materials from the library with no review process. Also, due to the extremely low number of certified teacher-librarians employed in Oregon’s public schools, school libraries in the state are often staffed by dedicated classified staff who frequently lack formal training or education in library principles and practices. These staff may be unaware of best practices around materials challenges.

We hope that this information is useful for your discussion about SB 1098. More information is available in the OIFC 2024 report and earlier reports linked above. We are also happy to answer any questions the committee may have about materials challenges in Oregon.

Sincerely,

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Salem, Ore – Libraries and schools in Oregon reported the highest number of challenges to books and other materials in 2023-24 since the State Library of Oregon began collecting data. Statistics on the past year's materials challenges and more are available in the latest report of the Oregon Intellectual Freedom Clearinghouse.

The Oregon Intellectual Freedom Clearinghouse (OIFC) was created in 1987 to collect information about intellectual freedom challenges at libraries and education institutions in Oregon. A challenge is any attempt to remove or restrict access to a library material, service, or program based on the objection of a person or group.

The 2024 OIFC Annual Report shows that 63 challenge incidents were reported from July 2023 to June 2024 in public libraries, schools, and colleges. In total, 151 items were challenged in those incidents, with 127 unique titles. This year sets records for the most items and titles challenged in Oregon. The previous record was set last year with 93 titles.

This Oregon record comes amidst a similarly record-breaking national climate of challenges. The American Library Association (ALA) reported that 2023 saw the most attempts to censor library materials since they began collecting statistics. OIFC data is reported to the ALA and compiled in their national statistics.

The most common reasons people submitted challenges were that they felt the materials:

- Were sexually explicit or pornographic;
- Included content about people who are two-spirit, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, intersex, asexual, or other identities related to sexual orientation or gender identity (2SLGBTQIA+);
- Were unsuited to the age group for whom they were intended;
- Contained profanity.

While most challenges were to books and other materials, 21% of official challenges were focused on library services or programs, vandalism, or entire categories of materials. These included antisemitic graffiti, challenges to all 2SLGBTQIA+ books in the library, defacement of library materials, and a Pride flag in a library window being shot with a BB gun.

A clear pattern has emerged in recent OIFC reports: incidents and challenged materials are disproportionately about, by, or center the stories of individuals who belong to an underrepresented protected class under Oregon law. In 2023-24, 87% of the items challenged told the stories of one or more underrepresented groups. 66% of challenged materials focused on 2SLGBTQIA+ people, while 22% centered Black, Indigenous, or people of color.

“Library and education staff in Oregon have once again shown that they are on the front lines of defending the intellectual freedom rights guaranteed to us all by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and Article I, Section 8 of the Oregon Constitution,” says Wendy Cornelisen, State Librarian. “In the face of fierce opposition and threats, these dedicated folks continue their work to ensure that everyone no matter their background sees their own experiences reflected in their school and library collections. The State Library of Oregon is committed to supporting libraries, schools, and their staff during this continuing surge in attempts to restrict the free flow of information.”

Libraries experiencing intellectual freedom challenges in Oregon are also supported by the Oregon Library Association (OLA) and the ALA. Volunteers on OLA’s Intellectual Freedom Committee respond to and advise libraries and schools during challenges, often serving as a first point of contact. ALA’s Office of Intellectual Freedom provides resources and consulting to help libraries prepare for and manage attempts at censorship. The State Library of Oregon relies on the expertise of both groups in its work on the OIFC.

Introduction

Scope

The Oregon Intellectual Freedom Clearinghouse (OIFC) collects reports about challenges to materials, services, and programs in Oregon public libraries and educational institutions.

The American Library Association (ALA) Office for Intellectual Freedom defines a challenge as “an attempt to remove or restrict materials, based upon the objections of a person or group. A banning is the removal of those materials. Challenges do not simply involve a person expressing a point of view; rather, they are an attempt to remove material from the curriculum or library, thereby restricting the access of others.”

Challenges can be to library materials (e.g., books, films, digital content), services and programs (e.g., displays, events, internet access), patron privacy (e.g., circulation records), or any other intellectual freedom issue.<sup>1</sup>

Challenges come in many forms. Some follow library policy and include a formal request for reconsideration. Others may be direct complaints to a governing board, administrator, or other authority; social media or news campaigns; or hiding, stealing, defacing, or discarding items. Still others may involve defacing or damaging items, displays, promotional materials, or facilities.

What follows in this report are data gathered by the State Library of Oregon about challenge incidents that occurred in Oregon libraries and educational institutions between July 1, 2023, and June 30, 2024. The data were analyzed and coded by State Library staff, including categorizing the initiators of challenges and their reasons for objection. The definitions used to determine those categories can be found in Appendix: Definitions.

The State Library appreciates its strong partnership with the Oregon Library Association’s (OLA) Intellectual Freedom Committee to help gather this data and, most importantly, support the staff and volunteers facing challenges.

Limits of this Report

The data shared here underreport the true scope of challenge incidents in Oregon. All incidents included in this report were either voluntarily reported to OIFC by involved parties, reported in news media or other public sources, or gathered from requests for support to the State Library or OLA Intellectual Freedom Committee. The nature of intellectual freedom challenges makes <sup>1</sup> Intellectual freedom, as defined by the ALA Office for Intellectual Freedom, is “the right of every individual to both seek and receive information from all points of view without restriction. It provides for free access to all expressions of ideas through which any and all sides of a question, cause, or movement may be explored.” These rights are laid out in both the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Article I, Section 8 of the Oregon Constitution.

gathering data beyond these sources difficult. Many challenge incidents go unreported and are not reflected in the statistics reported here.

Challenges may go unreported for several reasons. Most likely, people involved in incidents may not be aware of the option to report. This lack of awareness may be more common in K-12 schools. The number of certified teacher-librarians in Oregon schools has been decreasing for decades. School libraries are often staffed by dedicated classified staff, but they frequently lack formal training, experience, or education in library principles and practices such as intellectual freedom.

In addition, despite the anonymous reporting process, staff or volunteers in libraries and educational institutions may be hesitant to report challenges. They may fear political blowback, job repercussions, or negative media attention on their organization. Administrators may decide to handle such incidents with little transparency for the same reasons. For instance, administrators may address complaints about materials by quietly removing them from libraries or classrooms with no review process.

The analysis of objections to the challenged titles also has limits. Identifying the underlying reasons why a person challenges an item can be subjective for both State Library staff and the people who reported to OIFC. While some initiators of challenges clearly state why they object to materials, others may intentionally or unintentionally mask their actual motivations. For instance, an initiator may state they object to a material because it depicts violence or contains profanity. However, their underlying rationale may be that they dislike the viewpoint being conveyed by the work and feel that decisionmakers would be more receptive to other objections.

Absent further information, claims that a material is unsuited to its target age group can be especially difficult to interpret. Is it unsuited for that age group because it depicts situations the initiator feels are too mature, discusses topics the initiator feels are inappropriate, or contains words the initiator does not feel youth should use? For example, an individual might feel that youth under age 18 should never be exposed to materials by or about 2SLGBTQIA+ people.<sup>2</sup> In both this and the example above, the objections recorded about the material may not capture the underlying rationale.

Given these limitations, the data presented below at best represent the minimum number of challenge incidents and challenged materials in Oregon last year. The true figures are likely far greater.

Data

Summary of Challenge Incidents Reported

OIFC received 68 reports of challenge incidents. Of the reports received, the State Library determined 63 were official challenges, a 44% increase over last year.<sup>3</sup> This is the second highest recorded number of incidents since OIFC began operating in 1987.<sup>4</sup> Most were challenges to materials, many involving multiple titles. This has resulted in 151 challenged items reported, an OIFC record, exceeding last year's record of 93 items challenged by 62%.

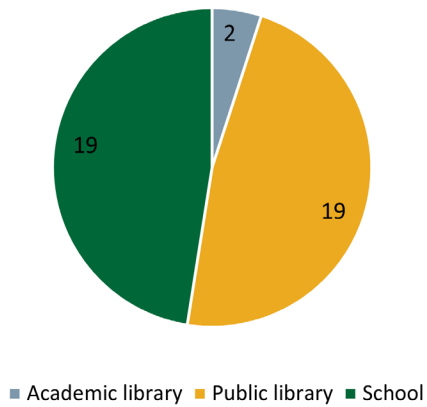

Challenges occurred at 40 different libraries, schools, and colleges, in rural and urban areas. There were challenges in 20 of Oregon's 36 counties, focused in western and northeast Oregon.

<sup>3</sup> Complaints that do not go beyond a complainant and staff member talking in the moment are not considered official challenges, unless they escalate to further action (receiving a formal reconsideration form, the initiator asking to meet with an administrator, etc.).

<sup>4</sup> The OIFC record for reported challenge incidents is 79, set in 1992-93.

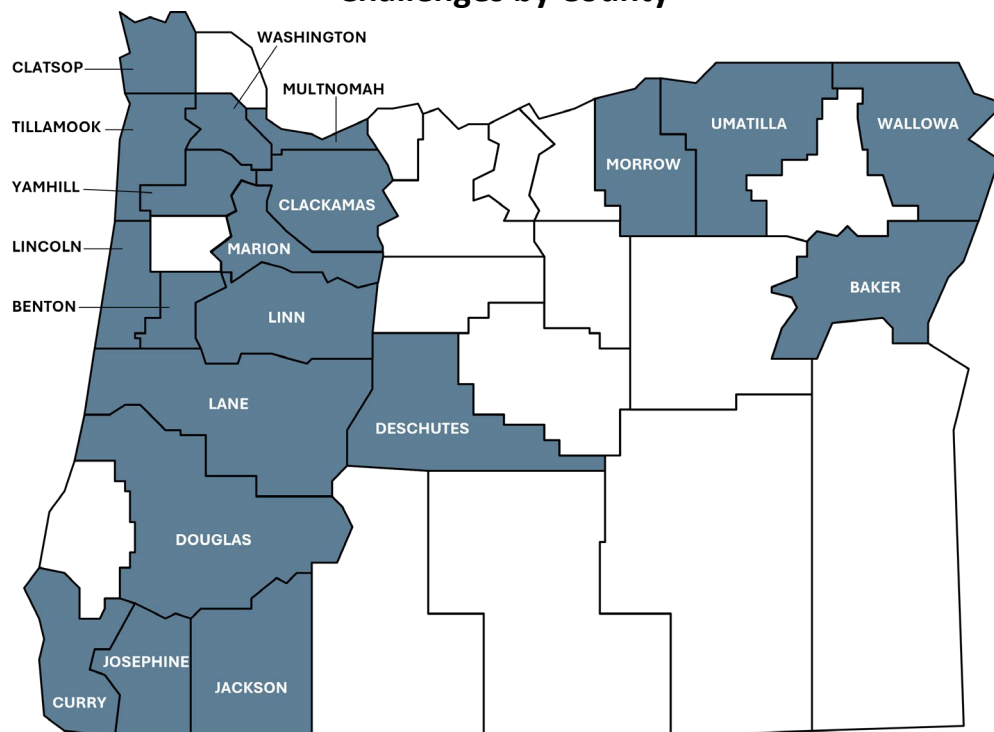

Challenges by Organization Type

Challenges by Location<sup>5</sup>

Challenges by County

Many challenges were initiated by family members, patrons, or community groups. Most challenges (67%) went through a process established by the library or school. Descriptions of the categories of initiators are in Appendix: Definitions.

<sup>5</sup> Areas determined using the Oregon Office of Rural Health's designations. Some locations have a service area that encompasses both urban and rural areas.

Challenges to Materials

Fifty (50) of the incidents involved challenges to materials, and 35% involved multiple items. Of the 151 total items that were challenged, nearly all were books and graphic novels, as shown in the chart below.

The 151 challenged items represent at least 127 unique titles. Four titles were unknown. Youth or teen materials are disproportionately challenged every year, a pattern evident this year as well. The table below shows the three most challenged titles, all of them books written for teens.

Title	Author	Times challenged
Beyond Magenta	Susan Kuklin	4
Flamer	Mike Curato	4
Heartstopper Vol. 1 <sup>6</sup>	Alice Oseman	3

The full list of challenged items can be found in Appendix: Challenged Items.

Materials were challenged for various reasons. Common objections included claims that a material depicts sex, nudity, violence, or abuse; contains profanity; is unsuited to its target age group; includes 2SLGBTQIA+ content; or expresses an objectionable viewpoint. An initiator may state multiple reasons for objecting to a material. The definitions used for stated objections is in Appendix: Definitions.

The objections are self-reported by the initiators or determined by the people submitting the OIFC reports based on interactions with the initiators. As noted above in Limits of this Report, keep in mind that stated objections may or may not reflect an initiator's underlying motivations for challenging a material.

<sup>6</sup> Heartstopper is a graphic novel series with four volumes. Each volume counts as a unique title for the purposes of this report. In total, volumes 1-4 of Heartstopper were challenged nine (9) times, generally in the same incidents, with volumes 2-4 each challenged twice.

Reasons for challenges are not known for 40% of the materials, particularly when the initiator is unidentified. For example, some public libraries experienced ongoing instances of items being removed from shelves or displays and hidden elsewhere in the building.<sup>7</sup> While the content of the materials can provide a clue to the objections, there is no way to know the initiator's true intent in such instances.

Seventy-two percent (72%) of items were retained as-is in the collection. Eighteen percent (18%) were either restricted or removed.<sup>8</sup> The remainder are still under review. Their statuses will be updated in the 2025 report. Updates on materials that were still under review when the 2023 report was published can be found in Appendix: Updates to Last Year's Report.

Other Challenges

Thirteen (13) other challenges were reported. These incidents included challenges to library services or programs, objections to an entire category or topic of materials (e.g., all materials with 2SLGBTQIA+ content), and graffiti or vandalism. Two (2) of the challenges exhibited antisemitism, while the remaining 11 exhibited bigotry against 2SLGBTQIA+ people. The list of these challenges is found in Appendix: Other Challenges.

<sup>7</sup> In two of those cases, the number of items reported represent only a fraction of the items that were hidden.

<sup>8</sup> According to the ALA Office for Intellectual Freedom, "Restrictions on access may include relocating the book to a section of the library intended for an older age group than the book is intended for, labeling it with a prejudicial content warning or rating, taking it out of the online catalog so it has to be requested from a staff member, removing it from open and freely browsable stacks, or requiring parental permission to check it out."

Analysis

Statewide, National, and Historical Context

Oregon is not alone in setting a record this year for the number of items challenged. In March 2024, ALA reported that 4,240 unique titles were challenged across the country, the highest they have ever recorded, and a 92% increase over the previous year.<sup>9</sup>

Some of the nationwide increase likely comes from recent heightened political attention on the content in books for youth. That attention is at least partially driven by organized statewide, regional, or national groups.<sup>10</sup> These groups often share lists of materials they consider objectionable on websites or social media, with explicit suggestions to challenge the titles at local schools and libraries. It is difficult to determine if these groups' efforts led to challenges in Oregon. However, several titles challenged this year have appeared prominently on these lists including The 1619 Project, Beyond Magenta, Flamer, Gender Queer, Heartstopper, and more.

Keeping with national trends, Oregon is no stranger to seeing increased materials challenges during charged political climates. Prior to 2022-23, the previous OIFC peaks in items challenged were in 1992-93 and 2000-01. Both years had contentious state ballot measures that may have also prompted materials challenges.

The November 1992 general election ballot included voter-initiated Measure 9, which asked Oregon voters "Shall constitution be amended to require that all governments discourage homosexuality, other listed 'behaviors,' and not facilitate or recognize them?"<sup>11</sup> The 1993 OIFC report indicates that 44% of the materials challenged that year highlighted 2SLGBTQIA+ content. In reaction to Measure 9, 1992-93 was the first year OIFC tracked 2SLGBTQIA+ content as a specific objection category. Oregon voters rejected the measure.

Similarly, the November 2000 general election saw two other measures – Measures 87 and 9 – which spoke to predominant themes of challenged materials that year.<sup>12</sup> Measure 87 would have "allow[ed] regulation of sexually oriented businesses through zoning," aimed at strip clubs and sex shops. Measure 9 would have "prohibit[ed] public school instruction encouraging, promoting, or sanctioning homosexual, bisexual behaviors."<sup>13</sup> That year's OIFC report showed

<sup>10</sup> A Fast-Growing Network of Conservative Groups Is Fueling a Surge in Book Bans. New York Times, December 15, 2022.

that 41% of material challenges focused on sexual and/or 2SLGBTQIA+ content. Again, Oregon voters rejected both measures.

The pattern evident in 1992 and 2000 continues in this year's data. The stated objections to 44% (67) of challenged materials involved 2SLGBTQIA+ content or sex/nudity. If anything, the trend is possibly accelerating, with 66% (100) of challenged items being about, by, or centering 2SLGBTQIA+ folks, compared to 41% last year.

Recently, several states have passed laws restricting access for youth to materials containing certain content.<sup>14</sup> The laws have resulted in many more materials being removed from libraries and schools, often with little to no review. Other states have taken an opposite approach, curtailing the removal of materials from publicly funded libraries and schools.<sup>15</sup>

During its 2024 session, the Oregon State Legislature considered Senate Bill 1583, which would have restricted public schools from removing curricular or library materials based on discrimination against protected classes. The bill was one of the most discussed of the session, with hundreds of people giving written or verbal testimony.<sup>16</sup> While SB 1583 did not pass both houses in 2024, its proponents are expected to introduce similar legislation during the 2025 legislative session.

Challenges also appeared prominently in local, state, and national news over the last year. Below is a sample of news stories about challenge activity in Oregon. All these incidents are included in this report's statistics.<sup>17</sup>

- LGBTQ+ Books Were Challenged \(and Beaten\) at Helix. East Oregonian, November 6, 2023.
- 'Profoundly Disappointed': Pride Flag at Newberg Library Targeted in Act of Vandalism. KTVZ, June 6, 2024.
- Voters Moving to Recall Seaside City Councilor Over Potential Age Restrictions at Library. Seaside Signal, August 1, 2024.
- Ashland Public Library Removes Pride Banner. Ashland News, September 5, 2024.

The elevated political and media attention may affect OIFC statistics beyond driving more challenges. The additional awareness of intellectual freedom issues might also increase knowledge and willingness to report incidents. The rise in challenges reported to OIFC could thus arise from a combination of more challenges occurring in the state as well as a higher proportion of challenges being reported.

<sup>15</sup> States Begin to Push Back on Book Bans – by Banning Them. Cable News Network, June 4, 2024.

<sup>17</sup> Some incidents cross reporting years, hence why some articles are included that were published after the OIFC reporting period. Incidents are included in the OIFC annual report based on when the challenge was first made.

Challenges and Protected Classes

No matter the stated reason for a challenge, one pattern is clear: challenged materials are disproportionately about, by, or center the stories of individuals who belong to a protected class under Oregon law.<sup>18</sup> In 2023-24, 87% of the items challenged focused on one or more underrepresented protected classes. Materials by or about these protected classes were also slightly more likely to be removed or restricted. They accounted for 93% of removed or restricted items, compared to 87% of total items challenged.

The Oregon Department of Justice (DOJ) tracks hate crimes — known as bias crimes under Oregon law — and bias incidents.<sup>20</sup> Given their disproportionate impact on protected classes, challenges may also qualify as bias crimes or incidents as defined by DOJ.<sup>21</sup> Several of the incidents identified in this report appear to have been driven by bias against people because of their protected class.

The State Library is unable to make legal determinations and thus does not distinguish between bias crimes and incidents for the purposes of this report. Based on the self-identified reasons

<sup>21</sup> Per DOJ, “a hate [bias] crime is a crime motivated in part or whole by bias against another person’s actual or perceived protected class,” and “a bias incident is a non-criminal hostile expression motivated in part or whole by another person’s actual or perceived protected class” [emphasis theirs].

why initiators made challenges, or the nature of the challenges themselves, 38% (24) of the 63 official incidents could be considered bias crimes or incidents under DOJ's definitions. These 24 incidents included any challenge incident where an initiator said they objected to a material because of its 2SLGBTQIA+ content and the 13 other challenges listed in Appendix: Other Challenges.<sup>22</sup> These figures likely underestimate how many challenges identified in this report might be considered bias crimes or incidents.

Challenges associated with protected classes are not uniformly based on potential hostility toward those groups. This year, three (2%) of the challenges were submitted because the initiator felt the materials exhibited prejudice or discrimination against people in protected classes or other underrepresented groups. Those three incidents are an important reminder that intellectual freedom challenges are made by people with varying perspectives, so any group's preferred content potentially could be challenged, restricted, and/or removed.

Nonetheless, year after year, challenges disproportionately are made against materials, services and programs that focus on people in protected classes or other underrepresented groups. The statistics are worth repeating: at least 38% of incidents and 87% of materials were by, about, or center the stories of people explicitly protected from discrimination under Oregon law.

The Price of Challenges

The incidents covered in this report are more than just lists of titles or numbers on a page. Staff and volunteers at libraries and educational institutions are on the front lines of receiving and responding to challenges. The incidents exact a financial toll on organizations and a mental toll on the people who respond to challenges.

Challenges increase the workload of schools and educational institutions. Review processes can last months, especially when multiple items are challenged in a single incident. That increased workload costs the organization, as staff must be redirected from other tasks. Temporary staff may need to be found to cover duties of staff involved in reviewing challenges. An organization also may need to pay for additional review copies of materials, hire outside consultants, or incur costs related to hosting meetings.

The psychological effects of challenges can be even more damaging, both for those working to resolve the challenge and the people who find representation in these titles. Library, school, and college staff and volunteers are regularly labeled falsely as "pedophiles" or "groomers," or their commitment to serving children or the public is questioned. In at least three instances this year, staff's safety or livelihoods were threatened. Sadly, this is likely an undercount of such threats. This abuse can result in mental and emotional distress for staff and volunteers. And that distress can lead to job dissatisfaction, burnout, and dedicated public servants leaving libraries and schools.

And as with the materials challenged, the adverse impacts disproportionately fall on people who identify as part of protected classes or other communities that are underrepresented. In addition to the toll placed on everyone else, folks from protected classes and underrepresented groups also experience their stories, their truths, and their value as human beings routinely questioned and othered by people who seek to restrict the free flow of information.

The State Library thanks the staff and volunteers, including members of OLA's Intellectual Freedom Committee, who respond to challenges, who report these challenges to OIFC, and who continue to ensure their collections and services represent their diverse communities in the face of opposition. People who wish to learn more about intellectual freedom in Oregon libraries and educational institutions can find more information at the Oregon Intellectual Freedom Clearinghouse, Oregon Library Association Intellectual Freedom Committee, or Intellectual Freedom Toolkit.

Definitions

Terms Used for Initiators

These terms are used to describe the people or groups who initiate challenges in libraries or educational institutions.

- Administrator: A person who works in an administrative position for the organization where the challenge occurred. Examples include library directors, department managers, principals, superintendents, deans, or governing board members.
- Community member or group: A person who resides in the community that the organization serves and cannot be classified as another type of initiator; or a group of multiple individuals operating within the community to collectively submit a challenge. Examples include parent groups, religious organizations, nonprofit organizations, advocacy groups, or social media groups.
- Family member: A person with a familial relation to a child who uses or attends the organization where the challenge occurred and complains on behalf of that child. Examples include parents, guardians, grandparents, or siblings.
- Patron: A person who uses the services of the organization where the challenge occurred and complains on behalf of themselves or their community.
- Staff/volunteer: A person who works in or volunteers for the organization where the challenge occurred and is not an administrator. Examples include faculty, librarians, classified or support staff, members of an organization's advisory groups, or anyone otherwise employed by or volunteering in the organization.

Terms Used for Objections

These terms are used to describe content in or attributes of a material that the initiator or person submitting the OIFC report indicate are reasons for the challenge.

- Alcohol/drug use: Material depicts use of alcohol, nicotine products, marijuana, or other legal or illegal drugs.
- Sex/nudity: Material depicts situations, actions, or nudity that the initiator considers sexually explicit, pornographic, or otherwise inappropriate.

- 2SLGBTQIA+: Material is created by, discusses, or includes people who are two-spirit, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, intersex, asexual, or another identity related to sexual orientation and/or gender identity.
- Prejudice/discrimination: Material has content that the initiator considers to be biased, discriminatory, or objectifying against people who are in protected classes or other communities that are underrepresented. Examples include ableism, racism, sexism, homophobia, or bigotry.
- Profanity: Material includes words that the initiator considers to be vulgar, inappropriate, or offensive.
- Mental distress: Material depicts people experiencing adverse mental states or behaviors. Examples include suicide, cutting/self-harm, eating disorders, anxiety attacks, or psychosis.
- Unsuited to age group: Material that the initiator considers to be inappropriate, unsuitable, or too mature for the age group to which the organization provides the material. For example, an initiator could request a book aimed at teens be moved to the adult collection of a library, a material in a middle school be moved to the high school, or the item be removed from school district entirely.
- Viewpoint: Material expresses political, religious, or other viewpoints with which the initiator disagrees. Examples include support for or opposition to political parties/candidates, stances on cultural/political issues, or content the initiator feels is against or denigrates their religion.
- Violence/abuse: Material depicts situations in which violent or abusive acts are committed by people against others. Examples include murder, assault, fighting, domestic abuse, sexual abuse/assault, incest, or bullying.
- Other: Objections that do not fit into other categories and appear rarely in reasons given for challenges during the period covered by this report. Examples include inaccuracy, witchcraft/occultism, encouraging disobedience of authority, creepy/disturbing content, etc.
