BACKGROUND:

The service and sacrifice of our nation's veterans have been instrumental in protecting the freedoms and liberties afforded to the people of the United States of America. Oregon has an illustrious tradition of honoring its veterans through official roadside memorials, but many of the veterans who have died to preserve the rights we cherish have not yet been honored with the recognition they deserve.

Lieutenant Colonel Herb Doby of Oregon City, who had an esteemed military career before joining the United States Air Force, was declared MIA during his service in Vietnam until his remains were identified on November 1, 1977.

Second Lieutenant Dale Allen Perkins of Oregon City, who was known for his selfless work with Korean orphans, died during his service in Vietnam on November 3, 1966.

First Lieutenant Patrick Leonard Woods of Oregon City, who served in the Peace Corps in Indonesia and Thailand before enlisting with the United States Army, earned multiple accolades during his service in Vietnam before his death on December 24, 1968.

Staff Sergeant Donald Dean Brubaker of Oregon City, who selflessly took his brother's place when he enlisted in the United States Army, died in Vietnam on September 28, 1971, when the Third Air Cavalry base where he was stationed was overrun.

Lance Corporal Gary Kyle Kestler of Oregon City, a respected United States Marine, was killed in action on May 28, 1968, while holding a defensive position in Quang Tri, South Vietnam.

Corporal Joel Lynn Gabriel of Oregon City, a United States Army indirect fire infantryman, was killed by hostile small arms fire in Long Khanh, South Vietnam, on February 11, 1969.
