BACKGROUND:

Frank Wayne Smith was born to Lester and Era Smith in Lakeview, Oregon, on October 8, 1945. He was raised in a close-knit family with a strong sense of duty, service, and community; his journey through life was marked by his dedication to his country, his family, and his community.

Frank Smith served his country with honor and great distinction in the United States Navy for 27 years, including active duty during the Vietnam War. He was a proud “mustang,” meaning he rose through the enlisted ranks before being commissioned as an officer—a rare and impressive achievement—ultimately attaining the rank of lieutenant commander. He earned many awards and commendations for his accomplishments during his long naval career, including the Navy Commendation Medal, the Navy Achievement Medal (two awards), the National Defense Service Medal, the Navy Expeditionary Medal, the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal, and the Vietnam Service Medal (five awards).

Frank Smith was dedicated to improving services for his fellow veterans. He earned bachelor’s and master’s degrees in business administration, as well as a master’s degree in public administration.

Frank Smith was a beloved fixture in the Port Orford community, where he was the owner of the Port & Starboard Restaurant & Lounge, an establishment built by his father and owned by his family for three generations. He believed deeply in the importance of giving back to his community, and he was a dedicated and tireless volunteer who gave generously of his time and resources to make Port Orford a better place to live, work, and play.

Frank Smith was an elected or appointed official on numerous local boards and commissions during his many decades of public service, including serving as chairman of the Port Orford-Langlois School District board. He had a profound impact on youth sports in Port Orford, where he was the varsity boys’ basketball coach at Pacific High School, and he could often be seen around town umpiring baseball games and refereeing basketball games.
