While the bill is written to appear as if it was written to protect children, the bill is in fact deceptive.

The bill is written in a way that insinuates that religious institutions are unsafe for children.

Many Oregonians would argue that the states attempt to hide health issues from parents is a serious issue, which has not been addressed in this bill.

Is this really a bill to protect children or to attack non-state (alternative) viewpoints?

This seems out of line with Oregon's goal to support diversity and inclusion.

I urge a no vote on this bill
