I just recently became aware of the work that OregonFlora is doing. It seems to me that this program benefits us now and in the future when we are dealing with what grows in Oregon and what makes the most sense to grow for the environment and the people. Without this detail, we will lose our history and in the future may wish we had more information. I know budgets are always tight, but I hope this project will get the support it needs to continue the good work it is already doing.
