My daughter lives in Bend, OR and comes to Salem, OR often. I worry about her traveling there and back every time. Several years ago, a friend was driving his girlfriend back home on the main highway when a deer ran out in front of him. Tony accidentally killed the deer, which was bad, but his girlfriend was also killed. He never married and I think it was because he lost his first love. Too many people and animals are killed on highways, especially when near wildlife habitat. Building safe crossings should be a no-brainer. What if it was YOUR loved one?
