I have been following Think Wild on Facebook and Instagram for quite some time and I had the privilege to visit Think Wild last year to observe a Red-Tailed Hawk release. Think Wild is a very important organization for the rehabilitation of injured and orphaned animals.

Their commitment to the wildlife and educating the community on prevention is more than commendable. They educate the public on how to live respectfully with urban wildlife.

They respond to thousands of annual inquiries regarding injured or orphaned wildlife. They prioritize native wildlife protection and conservation.

I hope this bill passes in order for Think Wild to continue their important work that is necessary for the well being of our precious wildlife that is running out of room because of the global crisis and land development.
