I work in native plant landscaping, and I rely on OregonFlora for my job. I often need to identify wild native plants, or check up on the ranges, names, or descriptions of plants I'm using in a garden. I'm looking forward to the third volume of Flora of Oregon when it becomes available, but in the meantime the website is an essential resource. Many others like me depend on OregonFlora, and we ask that you provide the funding they need, to keep providing us with quality information.
