I am in support of providing renters and owners in multi family dwellings with access to EV charging. These vehicles are cheaper to run on an ongoing basis and therefore could provide support for citizens with limited means. The lack of charging stations nearby locks multifamily dwelling citizens out of the possibility of making the choice that others have to own an EV. The stations could provide an alternative income stream to the building owner or association as well. That, together with the climate implications of reducing emissions from gas engines over time through electrification of transportation makes this bill a win win for owners and renters alike.
