I have been a CASA in Salem for about the last seven years. I've seen heartbreaking stories of children who have been abused or neglected by their parents. I have spent many many volunteer hours researching their situations and advocating for them in written and oral testimony in judicial court. I know first hand that the CASA program has improved the lives of the children whom I have been privileged to represent. CASA programs continually show that they improve outcomes for these children, thereby reducing future problems for the children.
