I strongly support establishing the OregonFlora Program at Oregon State University. The parts of the flora that have so far been published are the only resource we have that describes the plants that exist in Oregon. This is a massive project, and the product so far is excellent, but without steady and adequate funding it will be slow going to complete the project. The online and app versions of the flora make information about Oregon's flora available to all Oregonians, even if they don't have the printed books.

Please support this important work.
