Class I, III and IV offroad vehicles are perfectly capable of using non interstate highways with the necessary equipment.

It is my opinion that a bicycle on any road causes a higher risk to automobiles and trucks than an offroad vehicle. Not only to themselves but to vehicles having to overtake the slower moving bikes.

If bicycles can ride on a country road with no bike lane legally with no registration blinkers headlights or brake lights then there is no excuse to deny class I, III or IV offroad vehicles to do the same with the standard necessary auto equipment.
