Hello,

I believe now is the time to invest. Not only do we already have a local film industry that helps keep theaters, and local businesses open with their meetings, buying of goods, and film festivals; but also because L.A. will need time to recover from the fires. The industry doesn't sleep so business from outside the state is likely to come here so they can stay on schedule.

The arts is very important, especially in hard times like these. Art is what makes people feel heard, feel seen, and also adds live documentation to what is currently happening in the world. The arts should be celebrated, not shunned.

I support this measure and I believe you should as well.

Sincerely,

Haley McCoy
