Jeanine has done amazing work for the clients and families she serves in the AAC clinic at the University of Oregon. Many children (and adults) with disabilities aren't able to participate in the same activities as their typically-developing counterparts. Sleep away camp is a very common experience for children and all children should be able to participate in such at some point in their lives. This funding can help Jeanine's clients and families building their language skills through this new and shared experience by enhancing their lexicon of vocabulary, production of more complex syntax, and repertoire of conversational topics to share with familiar partners and new friends.
