As a parent of a young child, I strongly oppose the use of leaded fuels which can harm the children of the Portland area. It shouldn't be fair to harm the life of children solely for the purpose of entertainment, especially if there are other more responsible ways to provide that kind of entertainment. I've already heard about the use of electric cars for racing, which I applaud and condone. Why couldn't this be an option? It might even open up the racetrack to a larger and broader population who might support PIR.
